

I often wondered if heaven did exist.
Years of traveling, searching and looking around went by.
No sign of heaven.
I was still wondering.
But when I caught the very first glimpse of this Greek island, with pine-trees which seemed to rise straight out of the water, I knew for sure that heaven is a place on earth.

It's called Corfu.

Green it is. Wherever you look. Lots of rain in the winter and the nice temperature of spring have given the island an explosion of beautiful vegetation. Colorful flowers and plants, that match the millions of pine- and olive-trees, make Corfu look like a huge three-dimensional painting. A painting to fall immediately in love with. The sky above can be blue, with only the sun as a hot burning lamp in the middle. Or blue with white clouds, expressing the colors of the Greek flag. Even when it's grey or raining, Corfu retains its majestic appearance. There's no doubt about that!